The Club Management Association of America (CMAA) has been a cornerstone in my professional journey, offering invaluable opportunities that have shaped not only my career but also who I am as a leader. I intend to give back to CMAA and its members in any capacity necessary to extend these opportunities to the next generation of Club Management professionals and inspire new ones.

The Club industry holds immense potential and offers rewarding and exciting career paths. Yet, at the collegiate level, our industry often remains an elective in later years, overshadowed by more prominently recognized areas like restaurants and hotels. This underrepresentation does disservice to students and our industry, as it limits awareness of our industry's opportunities.

To bridge this gap, we must tell our industry's story creatively and in new ways. By leveraging CMAA and its vast network, we can spotlight the nature of Club Management and the career paths we offer. My goal would be to work with CMAA, colleagues, and academic institutions to integrate Club Management into hospitality programs, ensuring it is recognized as a vital and compelling career option early in college students' education.

Further, we can elevate the Club industry's status by showcasing success stories and fostering partnerships with hospitality leaders and institutions such as CMAA, USGA, and PGA.

My commitment is to advocate for these changes, ensuring the Club industry is recognized and celebrated within the broader hospitality landscape. We have every opportunity to inspire future hospitality professionals to explore and thrive in the private Club industry.
